

My name is Sarah Rice and I have been a practicing school psychologist for eight years, and I currently work in Gilbert Public Schools. I obtained my Bachelor's degree in Psychology from Arizona State University. I then went on to pursue my Educational Specialist degree in School Psychology at the University of Arizona, where I graduated from in 2015.

I have been the AASP treasurer since 2017, which I look forward to continuing being on the AASP board in this position. Prior to join the executive board, I was an AASP and originally joined as a student member.

As treasurer, I have the responsibility of providing input into the decision-making process and leading discussions regarding financial priorities. It is my goal to have our AASP financial decisions be guided by the AASP's key initiative and align with the Board priority plans. I look forward to learning more about our revenues, expenditures and working closely with AASP leadership. In addition, I feel that it is important to work closely with the office staff to monitor and analyze these expenditures and revenues on an ongoing basis. Our organization's assets need to be continued to be managed according to AASP financial policies and procedures, including the policies for investments and reserves. I have a good understanding of budgeting projections and reports, and understand the need to be highly organized, and experience with financial programs and organization.

As a practicing school psychologist and a current AASP member, I look forward to continuing in this role in our state association. I am honored to serve the AASP membership as their treasurer and will continue to do my utmost to ensure that our Association's assets are used in an effective and responsible manner.
